TARLTON C. GRAVES

One of Mt. Sterling's Oldest and Best Known Citizens Died Sunday Morning.

At an early hour Sunday morning the death angel visited the home of Mr. Tarlton C. Graves, on Holt avenue and claimed his soul, and departing took it to the Master who gave it life.

Mr. Graves had spent 77 years in this world and the advantage that he put the years to will mean life eternal in the next. He had been a resident of this city practically all of his life, and was widely known and loved throughout this entire section. He was of the type known as the "Southern Gentleman," and always lived a life above reproach.

His death did not come as a surprise for he had been in a serious condition for several months, and during the past week his death was expected at any moment.

For over 25 years he was agent for a New Jersey life insurance company, and was one of the best known men in insurance circles in this end of the State.

In the death of Mr. Graves Mt. Sterling loses not only one of her oldest and most beloved citizens but a man who was noted for his honesty and square dealing with his fellowman, he was a man that was always ready and glad to do a friend a good turn.

He is survived by his wife and three children: Miss Laura, Miss Minnie Sue and Mr. J. C. Graves, the popular clothing merchant of our city.

The funeral services took place at the home of the deceased Tuesday morning at 11 o'clock, conducted by Rev. W. J. Bolin assisted by Rev. H. D. Clark, the burial was in Machpelah cemetery.

With bowed heads we join a host of friends in extending deepest sympathy in the hour of sorrow.

Buys Excellent Farm.

Mr. George O. Graves, of Winchester, has purchased from Mr. and Mrs. E. S. Cunningham their farm, known as the Stoffer place, on the Grassy Lick pike, three miles from this city, for which he paid $115 per acre. The farm contains 115 acres and is a good one, well located and improved. It joins a lot of land owned by Mr. Graves and gives him an outlet on the pike close to the city.

Well All Right.

A Tennessee solon of undoubted freak variety has presented a bill to require all persons to marry by the time they are 21 under pain of punishment.

Talk Twenty.

Everybody wants as much for their money as they can get. That's gain, or profit, or saving, whichever you choose to call it. But that isn't all. How about security? Don't you want that, too? Now you may invest a certain amount of money in something, and if it fails to prove profitable, why you simply shrug your shoulders and say: "Oh, well, that won't break me! I've learned a lesson!" In the world of business that is called "necessary risk."

But you cannot indulge in such playfulness when it comes to Life Insurance; because you're buying life, and that's all together too serious a proposition for any kind of risk!

Hoffman's Company—The State Mutual of Massachusetts, will insure you against any risk whatever by a bond which the Commonwealth itself stands for. "I will do more. 'Twill save you money as a capstone to satisfaction! Ah, there's the point, you want to feel, and you've a right to feel, that the legates of your Life Insurance will derive all that you planned for them; and that in its procurement for them you'll also save in outlay."

Burley Tobacco Society Refuse to Endorse Cut-Out.

At a meeting in Lexington Monday the Burley Tobacco Society refused to endorse the cut-out plan for 1911. The reason is given in the following written and signed statement handed the members of the Burley Union Committee after the long session at the offices of the Burley Tobacco Society: "Lexington, Ky., Feb. 6, '11.

"Committee of the Burley Union. Gentlemen:—At the present time from your reports we do not see our way clear to recommend our people to take any action as to the 1911 cut-out.

"Respectively,
"EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE BURLEY TOBACCO SOCIETY.

"Clarence LeBus,
"Lister Witherspoon,
"U. G. Sanders,
"S. A. Shanklin,
"A. N. Slaughter,
"A. L. Ferguson,
"V. S. Taylor,
"C. C. Patrick."

The decision of the Burley Tobacco Society was asked for following a meeting of the Burley Tobacco Union that filled the big Circuit Court room in the Fayette county courthouse. A resolution had been adopted to put the matter of the cut-out squarely up to the Burley Tobacco Society, following reports from all the counties that were said to show 49,000 acres actually pledged to cut out the 1911 crop.

It is these reports with which the Burley people find fault. It was learned that the Burley Society people say that the independent counties made no such showing in the cut-out pledges as was expected and hoped for and that many of the signers are old pool members. It was further said that the Burley Tobacco Society would take part in no movement that did not have as its start a large number of the independent growers. When a majority of the independents were signed up tight and fast it was said, so that there would be no chance of dumping or taking advantage of conditions created by the union growers, the Burley Society was ready to throw its strength into the movement.

COUNTIES OBJECTED TO.

The counties in which the Burley Tobacco Society declared a poor showing had been made, with the signed to the cut-out and the number of acres planted in 1910, follow:

County	Acres signed	Acres grown
Fayette	1,400	6,000
Bourbon	1,600	7,000
Bath	3,255	5,000
Montgomery	2,914	5,000
Clark		5,000
Madison	1,000	7,000
Garrard		4,500
Lincoln	800	4,500

Anderson		5,000
Washington		5,000
Woodford	1,500	5,500

JUDGE YOUNG

As Special Judge Makes a Hit in Another District.

A dispatch from Elizabethtown, Ky., says:

"A judge who made an enviable reputation upon his first official visit to the Ninth Judicial district, was the Hon. Allie W. Young, of Mt. Sterling, Ky., who presided over the Grayson Circuit Court at its recent term, owing to the illness of the regular judge, the Hon. Weed S. Chelf, of this city. Judge Young is rather an infrequent visitor to this part of the State, and his appointment as special judge of the Grayson court gave general satisfaction, as there were many in this section, especially among the legal fraternity, who wanted to see in action this man who is spoken of so freely as holding an ever strong hand in the State political game. The Judge took the gavel in hand and soon let himself be known by fining a court official, sending an unwilling witness to jail and sharply reprimanding several of the attorneys at the bar for improper conduct in the court room. He, however, gave every evidence of fairness and earned the reputation of being a strict but just judge. At the hotel, after the close of court, he was always the center of a group of interested admirers listening to an endless supply of political anecdotes and jokes."

State Committee Meets.

The Democratic State Executive Committee, at its meeting in Louisville, acceded to Congressman James' request and amended the primary call so as to include the endorsement of a candidate for United States Senator. Corlis Carr Dead.

Mr. Corlis Carr, son of Mr. Thomas J. Carr, died at his home on Locust street in this city Sunday morning after a short illness. He is survived by his wife and several children. Funeral services were held at the residence, conducted by Rev. Moody, and the burial occurred in Machpelah cemetery. Mr. Carr was an excellent young man and has many warm friends who regret his death. He had been working at the Kirkpatrick & Clay tobacco warehouse for several months.

WITHDRAWS FROM RACE

Hon. Ben Johnson Withdraws From Governor's Race. McCreary Now Has Big Lead.

Basing his action on the alleged efforts of some of his opponents to inject religious principles in the campaign to defeat him for the Democratic nomination for Governor, Congressman Ben Johnson has announced his withdrawal from the primary. It is charged by Mr. Johnson, in a statement issued, that certain parties who have long been antagonistic to him, have tried during the past twelve months to work up feeling against him because he was a Catholic. In the close of his statement Mr. Johnson calls the Democratic State Executive Committee to call off the primary at its meeting Friday and order an old-fashioned State Convention, which will nominate a ticket "against which neither the bigot nor the Catholic can complain."

From present indications it seems almost certain that Senator McCreary will be the next Governor of Kentucky.

Changes in Undertaking Business.

The popular undertaking firm of Harris & Eastin has dissolved partnership and Mr. Eastin will become a partner of W. A. Sutton & Son in the same business. They will incorporate within the next few days and will do business in the Sutton & Cockrell building, corner Main and Bank streets. This will make an exceedingly popular firm and one that will command an immense business.

Dr. Harris will continue in the furniture and undertaking business and will no doubt continue to get a large portion of the trade.

Gets Stung.

Detective J. W. Hinson was called to Farmers, Bath county, last Friday and requested to bring his blood hound with him to trail a thief who had stolen a hive of bees. Accompanied by his trusty hound the officer went to the town on the noon train and after a few minutes the dog struck the trail and the chase started. After leading them several miles the culprit was located, but the bees seemed to object and swarmed over the officer, one stinging him between the eyes. In the melee the thief escaped. Officer Hinson returned to the city with his dog and says "no more for me."

New Furniture Store.

J. W. Baber, of Paris, has leased the store room corner Main and Bank streets, formerly occupied by Adams Express Co., of Ed. L. William and will conduct an up-to-date furniture store therein. Mr. Baber was for a number of years manager of the firm of J. T. Luman Furniture Co. at Paris.

Spillman, of the Department of Farm Management, United States Department of Agriculture, on "Farm Management;" "Feeding Farm Animals," by a member of the Experiment Station staff, Prof. J. J. An important feature of the institute will be a lecture on "Fruit Raising" by an expert fruit raiser of the Virginia mountains. He will show that fruit can be successfully raised in the Kentucky mountains.

The Executive Committee is negotiating with the railroads for reduced rates, and President Bigstaff hopes to make this an interesting occasion for the farmers.

Sad Death in Bath County.

News has reached here from Bath county telling of the sudden death of Mrs. J. M. Jones at her home near Owingsville. It is said Mrs. Jones was found dead in a chair, each hand tightly clasping the hands of her two children so tightly that the children could not release themselves. Mrs. Jones was about 25 years old and was at work repairing the paper in her room when she sat down in the chair to rest, and death came.

Mr. Heck Buys the Settle Carriage Company.

As a result of the administrator's sale of the late Edward Settle who conducted a general carriage business, on High Street, Paris, is still to have as one of the leading business enterprises of the city a first class carriage manufacturer and repair shop. After the disposal Tuesday of practically all of the manufactured work, the remainder, such as raw material and tools, was sold privately to Mr. C. W. Heck, of Mt. Sterling, who will conduct the business, moving his family at an early date to Paris.

Mr. Heck is one of the most experienced carriage builders in Central Kentucky, having been engaged in the business practically all his life. He will put in a new stock of material and with several skilled workmen will open up for business at once. Mr. Heck invites the farmers and business men of Paris and Bourbon county to visit his new establishment, which will maintain the same high standard of excellence and workmanship as during the career of the late John W. Holliday, and his successor, the late Edward Settle. —Kentuckian Citizen.

It is with much regret that we see Mr. Heck leave Mt. Sterling but we hope him abundant success with his new enterprise.

Trust Men Make Visit.

R. B. Dula, of New York City, one of the vice-presidents of the American Tobacco Company, together with R. K. Smith, of Louisville, State Manager of the Company, recently paid a visit to Lexington and occasioned quite a flutter among the members of the Burley Tobacco Union and the Burley Tobacco Society. A wild rumor was circulated during the stay of the Trusts representatives in Lexington to the effect that their visit was intended, by some unknown means, to break up the organization of the growers. Messrs. Dula and Smith declined to make any statement as to the object of their call, stating that they were merely looking into the general tobacco situation in Lexington and vicinity.

A Jailer and his Gallows.

The Jailer of Christian county recently advertised a gallows for sale. It was a good gallows, made of steel and only slightly used. The county never had much use for it at any stage of the game, though the oldest inhabitant has a faint recollection that a negro was "ushered into eternity" by means of it at some period since the close of the civil war. It has been retained, however, as a horrible example to other colored persons of Christian county which has what most of the Kentucky counties regard as a surplus. Now that the State of Kentucky is threatening to electrocute somebody at the Eddyville penitentiary, steel gibbets have been relegated to the category of last year's birds' nests and Christian county is willing to sell her gallows at a great reduction.

Most of the states in the Union have abandoned the gallows habit, and the only offer the jailer of Christian County has had for the instrument of death, comes from a college up in Michigan. The College doesn't want to hang anybody, although Michigan is not lacking in first-class hanging material. Indeed, there is room for suspicion that the college folks are under the impression that the jailer is offering a pair of suspenders for sale as they write; "We wish to place them on the College campus as a relic of Good Old Kentucky." However that may be, the Christian county jailer is not without a keen sense of the eternal fitness of things, and he doesn't propose to have "them" gallows displayed as a souvenir of Kentucky. He has written to the college to say that he has some conscientious scruples against letting his death machine be used for any such purpose, and in the course of his letter he says:

"It is a fact, that until recently the barbarous practice was employed in this state in executing criminals yet I am informed that we have about kept pace with our sister states in abolishing the practice, and we are not anxious that the youth of your great section be impressed with a false notion of our earlier citizenship. To say the least of it, if you teach to them the history of our nation, they will know the founders of our civil institutions were the nation's builders and defenders, and the object lesson on your campus would indeed be contradictory and confusing."

Score one for "good old Kentucky." She may have her faults, but she doesn't look upon a gallows as typically representative of her civilization of the past or the present and she doesn't think very much of the article as an ornament for a college campus. Doubtless there will be some disappointment in Michigan at the failure to land "them" gallows as an educational exhibit, but if the jailer's letter is duly pondered the effort will not have been all in vain. If the mild rebuke is read and heeded some pinheaded individual connected with the college aforesaid will receive a lesson more valuable than any he is likely to find in the curriculum of his institution.

Grave Charges Against Two Lexington Men.

Warrants were issued at Paris last week for the arrest of Smith Baker and Megibbon Kimbrough two well-known young men of Lexington, charging them with detaining a woman against her will and attempted seduction. The warrants were sent by register mail to Sheriff Dan Scott, of Fayette county. The warrants were the result of an escapade in Paris, in which two men and two reputable young women took part, and which, when the facts became known caused much indignation in Paris and resulted in the warrants being sworn out by William Remington, editor of the Paris Democrat. The warrants were made returnable before the County Judge at Paris.

Wednesday afternoon about 5:20 o'clock a young woman rushed into the store of the Link Grocery Company, in Paris, screaming: "For God's sake, save me," and fell upon the floor in a faint. When she revived she stated that she and a girl companion had accompanied Baker and Kimbrough to Paris on the 5 o'clock car from Lexington, the men stating that they would visit a picture show and other amusements. She said that the men instead took them to a disorderly house on Pearl street and that, seeing what sort of place it was she ran away to escape.

The girl was apparently not over 16 years old and was very much frightened. Her hair was disheveled and her dress torn. At this juncture her woman companion, who was about the same age, joined her, but the men did not appear. The girls asked to be sent home. Securing a description of the men, Policeman Fred Link arrested them and brought them before the girls, who identified them, but begged that the men be released as a trial would make the matter public and cause a scandal. They agreed if the men were released to accompany them home. The policeman granted the girls' tearful appeal, and the girls and men returned to Lexington on the 7 o'clock car.

When the circumstances became known in Paris much excitement was caused and Mr. Remington swore out the warrants before Police Judge E. B. January.

Washington News.

The question of the moment in Washington at present is the action which both houses will take upon the reciprocity treaty that was prepared a short time ago between the United States and Canada. There is no doubt that the Democrats will fall in line in favor of the measure, backing up President Taft. President Taft himself does not seem to be worrying over the passage of the treaty, as he is convinced that the matter is now up to the American people to decide for themselves through their representatives. He is, however, determined to gain action regarding the measure, even if a special session of Congress has to be called. The possibility of a special session of Congress is not worrying the Washington folk, however, as it is generally conceded that, even in the light of the short time remaining in the present session, the treaty will be decided upon immediately.

Grave Situation.

The tobacco situation throughout Kentucky is becoming grave since two widely differentiated factions are springing up, each of which seems determined in its present stand. Those in favor of the "cut out" policy for 1911 claim a majority, which is possibly true, but the minority that is in favor of growing during the coming season is steadfast in its determination to follow out this policy.

Senator Bradley's Views.

Senator William O. Bradley recently gave out his views on the big issues of the day. Senator Bradley stated that he was as yet undecided on the Lorimer case, the ship subsidy and reciprocity questions. He is, however, in favor of the tariff commission and is also pulling strong for the popular election of senators, with the amendment that the senate retain its constitutional right to regulate the time and manner of electing legislatures.

To Make National Park of Mammoth Cave.

Representative Robert Young Thomas, Jr., of the Third Kentucky District, recently introduced a bill into the House at Washington, appropriating $1,000,000 for the purchase of Mammoth Cave and its approaches in Kentucky for use as a national park. Inasmuch as public sentiment has been in favor of this move for many years, it is reasonably certain that the Thomas bill will be ratified and the Kentucky contribution to the wonders of the world will in the future be under the control of the War Department, to be preserved as one of the greatest works of nature for future generations to behold.

JUDSON HARMON, OF OHIO, FOR PRESIDENT

MR. JOHNSON'S CARD.

The card, of the Hon. Ben Johnson, withdrawing from the race for Governor, was a decided disappointment to his many friends and admirers throughout the State and is generally considered as an ill-timed and unfortunate document. The fact that Mr. Johnson is a Catholic, did him no injury whatever, in this county, and so far as we are advised, this is true, of every section of the State. To entertain such a prejudice, is a reflection upon one's intelligence. This alleged objection, was never mentioned here and we are forced to believe Mr. Johnson's fears, in this respect, were greatly exaggerated, if not entirely unwarranted. His own political career, covering many years of success, is a complete refutation of his present misgivings.

We have always admired Mr. Johnson and regret very much that he felt called upon to bring forward a proposition that has not and should not be an issue, in this, or any other, political campaign. In withdrawing, however, we feel he made a wise decision, as it has been generally conceded for months that he was not the choice of the democracy of Kentucky, for this nomination. No doubt much bad feeling would have been engendered, had he remained a candidate, to the end and his withdrawal, removes this possibility, insures a united party and makes victory a certainty in November.

PRIMARY CALL AMENDED.

The Democratic State Executive Committee, at its meeting Saturday, did the wise and Democratic thing by including in the State Primary Call, the selection of a nominee for United States Senator. For many years, the Democratic party has advocated the election of United States Senators by a direct vote of the people. No Democrat, who aspires to this high office, can consistently object to a submission of his claims to his fellow-democrats and we congratulate the Committee and the party it represents, upon the course pursued.

Teddy Called a "Disastrous Burden."

Among the books and manuscripts owned by Samuel Clemens (Mark Twain) gathered for auction in New York recently, was an interesting document referring to the retirement of Roosevelt from the presidency. A portion follows:

"Astronomers assure us an attraction of gravitation on the surface of the sun is twenty-eight times as powerful as a force on the earth's surface, and that an object weighing two hundred and seventeen pounds elsewhere would weigh six thousand pounds there. For seven years this country has lain smothering under a burden like that, the incubus representing in the person of Roosevelt the difference between two hundred and seventeen pounds and six thousand. Thanks be, we got rid of this disastrous burden day before yesterday, at least, forever, probably only for a brief breathing spell, wherein, under Taft, we may hope to get back some of our health. We may expect to have Roosevelt sitting on us again with his twenty-eight times the weight of any presidential burden that hostile Providence would impose on us for our sins. Our people have adored this showy charlatan as perhaps no imposter of his breed has been adored since the golden calf. So it is to be expected the nation will want him back again."

INVISIBLE INDIANS.

All Indians seem to have learned a wonderful way of walking unseen—making themselves invisible like certain spiders, which, in case of alarm, caused for example by a bird alighting on the bush their webs are spread upon, immediately bounce themselves up and down on their elastic threads so rapidly that only a blur is visible. The wild Indian power of escaping observation, even where there is little or no cover to hide in, was probably slowly acquired in hard hunting and fighting lessons while trying to approach game, take enemies by surprise, or get safely away when compelled to retreat. And this experience transmitted through many generations seems at length to have become what is vaguely called instinct.—John Muir, in the Atlantic.

AVIATOR CORD AND WIRE.

The arrival of the aeroplane has given us a new industry, or rather a modification of an old one, namely, that of manufacturing aviator cord and aviator wire. The Roebings have devised a special kind of wire aviator cord to be used for stays on aeroplanes. The cord consists of a number of fine wires of great strength stranded together. The strength of the different sizes runs approximately from 2,000 to 2,300 pounds. For steering gear a more flexible cord is provided, composed of six strands of seven wires each, with a center of either cotton or wire. The aviator wire differs from aviator cord in that it consists of a single wire instead of a number of wires twisted together. The wire is made in 12 sizes, with a breaking strength that varies from 2,000 pounds to 175.—Scientific American.

IS HUMAN VACUUM CLEANER

Amanda's Economies in Line of Good Housekeeping Have a Screw Loose.

Long before the introduction of the vacuum cleaner Amanda had achieved by sheer persistence of arm, the energetic wielding of broom and brush, the precise results accomplished by this excellent invention. Her husband whimsically complains that the house is always in process of renovation and seldom is a condition which can be considered comfortable and livable, but he is a mere man and little can be expected of him. Of course, Amanda is ill from time to time, usually as the result of doing more than she ought. She has headaches, backaches and nerves that are on edge. Her sons slip out of the house in the evening because they prefer to be where they are not reproved if they draw a chair from its place or leave a newspaper on the floor. Her daughters enjoy visiting much more than staying at home, and her maid seldom remains longer than a week or two. She had nineteen successive maids in a single season. Somehow Amanda's economies in the line of good housekeeping have a screw loose. She observed one day that she sympathized with the women who liked to have her house perfectly ordered and who then wished that she could take her family and live in the barn so that the house need not be disturbed.—Margaret E. Sangster, in Christian Herald.

SOCIAL INFLICTIONS.

I have seen men who neigh like a horse when you contradict them or say something they do not understand; then the overbold, who make their own invitation to your hearth; the persevering talker, who gives you his society in large, saturating doses; the pitiers of themselves—a perilous class; the frivolous Asmodeus, who relies on you to find him in ropes of sand to twist; the monotonous; in short, every stripe of absurdity—these are social afflictions which the magistrate cannot cure or defend you from, and which must be intrusted to the restraining force of custom, and proverbs and familiar rules of behavior impressed on young people in their school days.—Emerson.

500 BULLETS PER MINUTE.

The recently invented Benet-Mercier gun combines the rapidity of fire, range and effectiveness of a machine gun with the lightness and action of a magazine rifle. The gun is fired from a rest and held against the shoulder of its operator, who can either fire from a sitting position or lying prone. The regulation cartridge is used in clips that hold 50. A good rifleman can discharge from 300 to 500 shots per minute, if assisted in feeding by a man to fill the clips. The gun is at present undergoing a series of tests by army officers, with a view to its adoption by the government.—Popular Mechanics.

$50,000 DAMAGES

By JOHN PHILIP ORTH

The question with Miss Lucy Ramsey for a year past had been whether she would take up a literary career or establish a squab farm. She had literary aspirations, but all the squab books said there was 60 per cent. profit in squabs.

Miss Lucy was twenty years old, and her education was finished. Her mother stood neutral on the great question to be solved, but her father, who was a village physician, took a rather selfish view of it and argued: "If you write books none of my patients will buy them; if you raise squabs they will order more or less of the birds on my prescriptions."

The squabites probably would have carried the day but for an accident. One day Miss Lucy sat under a blossoming apple tree. She was not feeling gay. Her thoughts turned to sad things, and having the stub of a pencil and a piece of paper handy she wrote a sad poem entitled: "Will They Miss Me When I'm Gone."

Without saying a word to anyone she sent the verses to the Cold Harbor Weekly Record. They were not only published, but the editor called attention to them editorially. He stated that a new Kipling had arisen, and that within a year the world would be singing her praise.

There was nothing cold-hearted about the Cold Harbor Record. The editor wrote Miss Lucy a very flattering letter. He would have sent her a check for $200 if financially able. He would never be financially able to send anything but the Record, but would see that that reached her every week. All great literary lights in prose and poetry had had to have a beginning. The Record offered Miss Lucy the needed stepping-stone. It would publish all her poetry, and it would be delighted to have her dish up the news of her village and the country around.

Papa Ramsey saw the letter and replied that he was still for squabs. Mamma Ramsey saw it and said she was still neutral. Miss Lucy read it over for the seventh time and her career was decided. It was to be literary. Within an hour she was at work on another poem entitled "Will the Blossoms Fall Upon My Grave?" She also procured a ten-cent notebook and made ready to gather items.

She did gather. She wrote of sewing societies, engagements, marriages, accidents and other things, and the Cold Harbor Weekly Record began to put on airs and brag over the Hot Creek Weekly Times.

Miss Lucy had girl friends to help her along in her literary career by telephoning in items. It was four weeks before she struck a sensation. Then it came from a village five miles away, and it was gilt-edged. It was an opportunity such as Shakespeare sighed for in vain. As telephoned in and written up and published in the Record under four scare-heads, Constable Baker had arrested a desperado who had stolen an auto in the city and was making across the country. There had been a desperate fight. The prisoner was suspected of being a country Raffles. He had given the name of George Tjater, and claimed to be innocent, but the authorities were up to his gaiters. State prison yawned for him.

It was the greatest sensation the Weekly Record had ever had, and it made the most of it.

Three days later the proud editor was groveling in the dust. He had a libel suit on hand, with damages laid at $50,000. Miss Lucy Ramsey had another. She wasn't groveling. She was too scared. When Papa Ramsey was told of the service of the papers, which happened when he was out visiting a patient, he turned white and groaned:

"Fifty thousand dollars! You'll have to go to prison for 25 years to satisfy that judgment!"

When Mamma Ramsey came to know the substance of the summons served on her daughter in her presence, she lifted her hands and sobbed out:

"Oh, why didn't I also advise you to raise squabs!"

There had been a bad mix-up. The constable had arrested a man for stealing something from Mr. George Lister's auto as it stopped for a while in the village. There had been a fight, but there was no desperado in the case. Miss Lucy's informant was an excitable person, and had drawn on her imagination a great deal. It was a clear case of libel. The editor of the Record drove over and said it was, and intimated very strongly that he would commit suicide to escape the consequences.

Doctor Ramsey went to see a lawyer, but got no consolation. The suit could be defended, but the verdict of the jury could be foretold months ahead. The doctor went to see the lawyer who had the case in hand, and what he got from him was:

"Mr. Lister is a wealthy and very respectable young man. His reputation must suffer from this. It nearly broke his mother's heart when she read that article in the paper. It will damage him to the amount of a million dollars, but he has told me to settle for $50,000."

"But I'm not worth $10,000!" groaned the doctor.

"No? I'm sorry for you. You should be worth $60,000, and then you could settle this case and have $10,000 left!"

Doctor Lister had a cozy place on the outskirts of the village. By walking a quarter of a mile one came to a spot where the river swept in close to the highway, and there was a bit of a grove there and seats under the trees. Miss Lucy had often walked out there when trying to decide on her career. Now, with that awful libel suit hanging over her head, she took to going oftener.

On this particular afternoon she had dim thoughts of suicide. With the silent waters rolling over her she would be at rest and the libel suit would have to be quashed.

The young lady did not jump into the water. She hadn't arrived at that point yet. She was just thinking about it when the bench on which she sat broke down. It was a sharp declivity to the bluff, and then a fall of three feet, and she went rolling to plump into the stream. Perhaps she screamed. Whatever she did or not made no difference to the young man coming along in the auto. He saw the accident, stopped his machine, and was in the water supporting her before she hardly understood what had happened. There was quite a struggle to reach shore, and when it was accomplished she was picked up in her wet state and deposited in the auto, and all the young man said was:

"Point out your house as we come to it, please."

The doctor as well as the mother were at home. Miss Lucy was whisked off to her room, and after the doctor had received a brief explanation of the affair the autoist excused himself and departed. He came next day, however, as was very proper. Miss Lucy received him, as was very proper. The father and mother rendered thanks. And when the hero handed out his card he thought it also very proper to add in explanation:

"I am the plaintiff in the $50,000 libel suit, you know. I ordered it discontinued this morning. I—I can't save a young lady's life and then sue her, too, can I?"

"They told me all wrong about it," pleaded Miss Lucy, "and you don't know how sorry I have been."

"We'll talk it over some day—when I get over being a desperado."

And they are talking it over so frequently, and talking other things with it, that the doctor shakes his head in a dubious way and says to the wife:

"This is going to be a lonesome house when Lucy steps off, but I expect she's got to go."

"Well! If she was the least kin to me she'd have more pride 'n to give him a thought," Aunt Jane interrupted.

Mrs. Lucy sighed. "Myrilly's not forward," she said. "You'll see that, no matter what you think. I believe she'll live and die loving Len—and all she's got to feed her heart on is just this; she made a wreath—ambrosia and white rosebuds and summer chrysanthemums, and sent it for the old man's funeral. Lots more folks sent flowers, the very best they could pick in their gardens—and Len left them in the parlor. But Myrilly's wreath went on the coffin—and with it—down in the cold ground. You see, before the trial, while the old man was in jail—they wouldn't take bail, seeing the charge was murder—she'd sent little nosegays to him whenever she got the chance. Folks thought it was awful—me letting her do it—but she was just such a young thing—and I felt sorry myself—the Talbots, you know, had held their heads so high, it did seem a shame—their come-down."

"Well! All I've got to say is—the day she ups and marries some good, sensible young man—you say they all like her—that day I make my will leaving her all I've got," Aunt Jane announced. "But if she's going to keep on mooning after one of that bloody-minded stock, my money goes straight to my husband's kin."

"Myrilly won't care—she's mighty independent. And if she ever knows you to say that, she'll be more'n ever set," Mrs. Lucy said with a little hard laugh that had in it a spice of pride. "I won't care, either," she went on. "Whatever Myrilly may or mayn't do, she'll be worth a dozen such as John Miller's slipshod nieces."

"It's easy to see where she gets some of her foolishness," Aunt Jane retorted, angrily, going outside in a huff.

She knew the pasture no less than the meadow—it was the old Hicks farm, its owner's thriftlessness proclaimed by the rocks and bushes that cumbered the face of it. It sloped gently upward to a long crest, from which one could see the Talbot house and the fields about it.

Mrs. Miller had a morbid wish to see it. She made her way slowly up the slope and came out at last upon the crest, but in a little dip of it that partly sheltered her from view. In the dip she found another occupant—Rob Roy, her sister's dearly loved collie, recreant to name and nature, sucking the blood of a newly killed ewe. Her twin lambs lay a little beyond, their heads bitten through. Another ewe was gasping a yard or two away.

At sight of a human being Rob Roy first crouched, then growled, bristling menacingly. But Mrs. Miller had at least the virtue of courage. In a wink she had a firm grip of his collar and was leading him away from the scene of his crime.

Before she had gone twenty yards she found herself facing Len Talbot. "I was bringing him to you. I know these must be your sheep," she explained. "The Hickses never had anything live but children."

"Yes—they are my sheep—on my land—I bought it last year," he answered. "But why, O why didn't you let Rob escape? I can't possibly shoot him. Not though he is—a convicted murderer."

"Why not?" Mrs. Miller demanded, looking keenly at the tall, lean-faced man she remembered a merry lad. He bore her scrutiny well.

"Because," he answered, "Myrilly loves him. I wouldn't hurt her for a kingdom."

"You wouldn't? Humph!" Mrs. Miller snorted. "And you're letting her peak and pine because you're too proud to say a civil word to her?"

Talbot stepped close to her, caught her shoulder in a hard grip and said, his voice shaking: "Let go the dog, I tell you! And never dare mention what you have seen. Myrilly! Madam, you are cruel—crueler than death."

"But—not as cruel as you are," Aunt Jane persisted. "I hate to say it—I've been making myself believe I'd cut her off with a shilling—but now I've seen you—I can't do it. She loves you—and I don't much blame her. You—you don't look to be anything but a gentleman—and a gentleman's son."

Then and there, in the face of scandalized birds and to the disgust of Rob Roy, Len Talbot hugged and kissed Aunt Jane as heartily even as he did upon the wedding day, less than a month later.

Good Roads.

Much has been said and written on the subject of good roads. Much more in fact, than has been accomplished. It is not the purpose of this article to criticize the road and street condition, for the writer is free to confess he is not familiar with the conditions that confront the County and City in the maintenance of the roads and streets, but simply to offer some suggestions that seem to be both economical and practical.

The first, and most important thing to be considered is the quality of the stone, the second is the economy of applying it, and the third, the skill with which it is applied.

Looking at the first proposition if the County and city will get together and get options on as many quarries as they think advisable and within a reasonable distance of the city, take samples of stone from each quarry to the State College, have them analyzed particularly with reference to their use for McAdam, and buy such a quarry. This quarry of course should be near the C & O R. R. tracts. Let the county and city join with each other buy this quarry, buy and install a crusher with ample capacity to meet the requirements. This being done secure from the C & O road the privilege of constructing bins under the Coal Road Trestle where the stone may be dumped from the cars into bins and by chutes into wagons. This will secure the greatest economy in handling. After this the only thing remaining will be the services of a good road builder.

It will be claimed of course that this will necessitate the outlay of considerable capital which is true probably an investment of $10,000 or $12,000 will be required. By this means the county pikes can be kept up for a distance of two to two and a half miles from the Court House, and certainly the city can have the cheapest and best streets she ever had.

The Fiscal Court and City Council may tell us they have no funds which is probably true. But where is the farmer or business man that will not donate something toward raising $10,000 or $12,000 if they can be assured their roads and streets can be better, more economically maintained. Of course politics should be entirely eliminated and every good citizen should feel that economy and quality are the only things to be considered.

We invite the serious consideration of the Fiscal Court and City Council to these suggestions and trust some good may be devised from them. W. P. O.

Take Notice.

Through the courtesy of the Ramsey Syndicate, City billposters of Mt. Sterling, there will be posted in our city four posters of two different designs showing the cause and prevention of Tuberculosis.

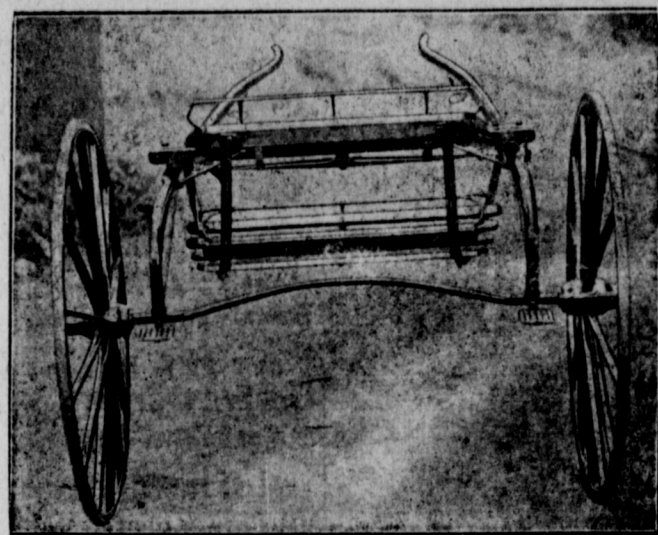

One poster shows how, by a careless consumptive spitting upon the floors of his rooms the tuberculosis germ is carried to the other members of the family, and the other poster shows very graphically how tuberculosis may be contracted by sleeping in rooms where there is no fresh air.

It has been proven beyond the shadow of a doubt, that tuberculosis is not hereditary, but is a contagious disease very much like Small Pox or Typhoid Fever and can be prevented if the persons having the disease will be careful and not scatter it by careless spitting.

Through the generosity of the National Billposting Association, these educational posters are being displayed in over four-hundred towns and cities in the United States. The posters which will be displayed in 32 cities in Kentucky are sent out by the Kentucky Association for the study and prevention of tuberculosis, whose headquarters are at 215 East Walnut Street, Louisville.

Ashland Mayor Sued for $140,000

The greatest sensation yet to develop in connection with the alleged violations of the local option laws in Ashland came when it became known that the twenty-eight men who stand indicted and whose trials will be conducted during the present week before Judge Wurts, of the County Court, came when their attorney, Will A. Young, who entered a civil suit against Mayor Moore, of Ashland, charging that they had been damaged to the extent of $5,000 each, by reason of false arrest, under the orders of the Mayor. There being twenty-eight of the defendants, the aggregate amount claimed in the suits is $140,000.

Subscribers will confer a great favor by promptly renewing without making it necessary for us to send out statements. Postage is quite an item of expense where a number of subscribers are involved. There is not much margin of profit in publishing a country weekly paper at only $1.00 a year; in fact most weekly papers are getting $1.50 to $2.00 per year.

We, therefore, will highly appreciate promptness in renewing and remitting for past due subscriptions. The date following your name on the wrapper or on the margin of the first page of your paper indicates the time to which your subscription has been paid. Prompt attention to this matter will be highly appreciated.

GHOULS OPEN GRAVE.

An Attempt Made at Stanford to Secure the Body of Attorney G. B. Saufley.

Ghouls were at their ghastly work in pretty little Buffalo cemetery, on the hill above Stanford, last week. They opened the grave of George B. Saufley, son of the late Judge M. C. Saufley, and reached the wooden box which inclosed the metallic-lined coffin in which lie his remains, only to leave before their job was completed.

Footprints in the soft sod about the grave and even in the moistened dirt which had fallen back on the sarcophagus top as the work of excavation was carried on indicate that a woman had a hand in the affair. Traces of two horses standing long in the cold night, one tied to a fence and the other—probably hitched to a spring wagon—standing in the driveway near the grave, showed that the ghouls came in two rigs.

A warrant charging Mrs. P. W. Harrison with the crime was sworn out by County Attorney W. S. Bursh. When Sheriff McCarty and deputies went to the home of the woman, six miles in the country, to serve the warrant, it was discovered that she had hurriedly left. Tenants on the place said that she had told them to take care of her things until she came back, but she did not know how soon that would be.

Her buggy tracks led toward Danville, where it is believed she caught a Cincinnati Southern train for Cincinnati or some other city. Mrs. Harrison is divorced from her husband and is about 45 years old, a blonde, rather slender and wore a black suit with a small black-plumed hat.

The warrant for her arrest was issued upon information that she had bought a spade that evening shortly after 6 o'clock; that she refused to give detectives, who went to her home earlier in the afternoon information as to her whereabouts the previous night, and the further fact that horse-shoes which she had had removed from her horse by a blacksmith apparently fitted into the horse tracks in the sod near the grave.

Members of the Saufley family and others are inclined to believe that the deed was planned by some woman, perhaps demented, who may have been a great admirer of young Saufley and been anxious to secure his remains for cremation that she might save his ashes. So far as known Saufley had but one love affair, and it is understood that at the time of his death he was engaged to marry a Lexington young woman who is now in Washington, D. C.

The idea that professional ghouls sought the body of the young attorney for some medical college is scouted, generally, for it is believed that had any such plan as that been under way, the ghouls would not have waited so long after his death in their effort to secure his body. That they were so easily scared away when five minutes more work would have enabled them to get the body is believed by many to prove that they were amateurs at the ghastly game.

H. Rowan Saufley, a brother of the deceased, Chief of Police Carter and other detectives have gone to work on the case.

AMUSEMENTS.

"PECK'S BAD BOY."

Local theatregoers are to be offered the new and revised edition of "Peck's Bad Boy" at The Tabb Opera House to-night (Wednesday). The mere announcement of the coming of this attraction will be sufficient to arouse the interest of a very considerable number of people who are not generally classed as theatregoers. "Peck's Bad Boy," is as much of a "classic" in its line, as is "Uncle Tom's Cabin" and is almost equally well-known in every section of the United States.

"LENA RIVERS."

The announcement of the coming of "Lena Rivers" is certain to arouse feelings of pleasure in advance to the countless people who are familiar with Mrs. Holmes' book. The play was taken from the novel and has been the principal success of the season, and it has known an amount of popularity that has surprised even the most of its sanguine well-wishers. The play is said to be a delightful reproduction of all the dramatic and comedy scenes of the book. At The Tabb Opera House Saturday night, Feb. 11.

"THE GENIUS."

There is said to be one hundred producing managers in the theatrical world and yet the reliable ones are few and far between and while nearly every one of them insist on having their names in large type, probably not more than five managers can draw anything on their own personal reputation. One of these five, however, is Mort H. Singer, who will present Henry Woodruff at The Tabb Opera House, Feb. 13, in a new musical song comedy entitled "The Genius." The new play is by Wm. and Cecil DeMille, the musical portion having been supplied by Paul Reubens. The cast was personally selected by Henry Woodruff and comprises many Broadway notables, while the chorus—the vintage of 1910, was engaged for voice as well as charming appearance.

N. B: This attraction is secured by Manager Wilkerson at a guarantee of $600.

REGARDING ADVANCE SALE.

The advance sale of seats for the engagement of Henry Woodruff in "The Genius" which will be seen at The Tabb on Feb. 13, will begin Friday morning at 10 o'clock at White's Drug Store. Many out-of-town patrons have written for reservations, but only those that are accompanied by money orders or check will be attended to, as the Manager cannot afford to hold seats unpaid for when the home people are asking for them. From the amount of interest being shown for this extraordinary event, the choice seats are going to be grabbed very rapidly.

Louisville Is The Place.

Newspapers throughout the State are boosting Louisville as the meeting place for the next Democratic National Convention, which will have the honor of naming the Democratic nominee for President. The Gateway City is equipped with an auditorium ably suited to the needs of such a convention and Kentucky hospitality, such as is found in no other place on earth, would be tendered to the gathering that will offer the choice of the Democratic people for the highest office in the land.

Abandon "Cut-Out" Movement in Shelby County.

James F. Middleton, chairman of the Independent tobacco growers' organization of Shelby county and vice president of the Burley Tobacco Union, announced that the fight to secure signers to the 1911 cut-out pledge in Shelby county had been abandoned. He says there has been a strong change in the sentiment of the growers in the county during the past ten days and that many of them now appear to favor growing a crop this year.

Solicitors were sent out in every precinct in the county to induce growers to sign pledges agreeing not to raise any tobacco this year, but they met with poor success. Many of the large raisers of the weed refused to sign until their neighbors had affixed their signatures and the small growers will not join the movement until the large land owners are tied up. As a result the solicitors secured very few pledges, and it has been decided to abandon the fight in Shelby county.

Double Season Is Bluegrass Choice.

At a meeting of the directors of the Bluegrass Baseball League, a double season of 120 games, sixty to each section, was decided upon. An official baseball was adopted and other important matters attended to. Every club except Richmond was represented, and practically every question was decided unanimously, leaving all the directors with a good spirit to carry home.

The league season will begin May 9, and close September 4. The first section will close July 5, and at the close of the second block the two winning teams will play for the year's championship. The winner of each season will be regarded as a pennant winner.

One hundred and twenty games will be played in 118 days. Three double-headers will be played, leaving only one open date. The league adopted the ball after a warm argument.

The play-off for the championship of the year in case one club does not win both pennants, will take place on September 6 and 7, 9 and 10. Other games will be played if necessary, until one club wins four. Opening games and holiday dates will be pooled, but Lexington will play at home every Sunday. The detailed schedule will be made out about the last of February and submitted by President Ussery to the directors for ratification.

On Record.

We desire to go on record right now as being of the firm opinion that a literary woman who wants to be loved should see to it that her flap-jacks are the equal of her sonnets and her corned beef hash every bit as good, if not better than her essay on Browning.—Exchange.
